INTRODUCTION

Each year the Department of School Visitation receives numerous requests from superintendents and boards of trustees for information concerning teachers employed in Texas high schools. It has seemed to the Department that there is sufficient demand for some of the information collected to warrant a wider circulation of it than has been possible heretofore. It is believed that such information will prove of genuine service to teachers and school authorities.

Blanks were sent out in October 1915, to all the high schools in the state that were, at that time, classified by the State Department of Education as schools of the first class. These blanks called for a great deal of detailed information. Hence, it took considerable time to get them filled out and returned. Finally, the information was received from all the schools that were affiliated with the University and from 67 schools that have not yet received affiliation, though several of this number will doubtless receive affiliation this session. Since there were 173 public high schools affiliated, the total number of schools whose teachers are listed in the directory is 240. It was not thought advisable to include the information from the private schools.

The Department of School Visitation, in publishing a directory of Texas high school teachers, hopes to serve, at least, two general purposes: (1) To furnish all those interested in educational conditions in Texas some definite data on the high-school teaching force now working in the high schools, (2) To furnish to school officials a basis for comparing some of the vital factors involved in high-school instruction. It will be noted that the data given cover such important matters as salary, scholarship, experience, extent of service in a particular community, teaching hours per day, and the subjects taught. While these are not all the factors that affect instruction, yet they must be given much weight in estimating the teaching efficiency in any school.

The data given in this bulletin indicate remarkable development in teaching efficiency in Texas. To fully appreciate the great improvement it would only be necessary to compare present conditions with those of ten, or even five, years ago.

Although the increase in salaries has little more than kept pace with the increase in the cost of living and the cost of producing the kind of teacher that is in greatest demand, yet it will be found that teachers' salaries are today from 30 to 40 per cent higher than they were ten years ago.

That the scholarship has increased is evident from the fact that 51 Texas high schools met the requirements of the Southern Commission this year.

Another marked improvement is noted in the tendency to reduce the teaching periods per day per teacher. School authorities are rapidly coming to the opinion that five or six class periods per day represent the maximum for any teacher if really successful teaching is to be done. When such large, authoritative, educational bodies as the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, and the Commission on Accredited Schools of the Southern States announce that the number of daily periods of class-room instruction should not exceed five, it is not from any humanitarian impulse to protect the teacher, but rather to protect the pupil from superficial, inefficient, and deadening instruction which, instead of interesting and enlightening the child, bores him and makes school life distasteful. It is conceded by practically all American students of education that teachers of science and teachers of such subjects as English and history, which require much written work, will do more effective teaching in five class periods than in six. Texas high-school authorities have realized that merely holding recitations is not necessarily teaching. It is evident from the data collected that vigorous effort has been made to reduce the number of recitation periods of the teachers.

In the small high schools it will always be necessary for a teacher to teach more than one subject. In the larger high schools departmental teaching has come to be the common practice.

Unfortunately, the annual change of teachers in the high schools continues to be a serious obstacle in the way of high-school development. It is practically impossible to maintain high standards in any school that must "break in" a considerable per cent of its teaching force each year. Until there is a greater supply of teachers who take up the work as an actual profession there seems to be no remedy for the constant change in high-school teaching forces.

It has been difficult to work out any satisfactory list of abbreviations for the many institutions which prepare teachers. For institutions located in other states, the abbreviations submitted by the teachers have been used in most cases. In listing Texas institutions in which teachers received training, the following arbitrary abbreviations have been used:

1. A. C.—Austin College.
2. A. & M.—Agricultural and Mechanical College.
3. B. F. C.—Baylor Female College.
4. B. U.—Baylor University.
5. C. I. A.—College of Industrial Arts.
6. D. B. C.—Daniel Baker College.
7. E. T. N. C.—East Texas Normal College.
8. H. P. C.—Howard Payne College.
9. N. T. S. N.—North Texas State Normal College.
10. P. C.—Polytechnic College.
11. S. H. N. I.—Sam Houston Normal Institute.
12. S. C.—Simmon's College.
13. S. W. T. N.—Southwest Texas State Normal.
14. S. W. U.—Southwestern University.
15. T. C. U.—Texas Christian University.
16. T. U.—Trinity University.
17. T. W. C.—Texas Woman's College.
18. U. of T.—University of Texas.
19. N. W. T. N.—Northwest Texas State Normal.

The schools on the Southern List are marked with a star.

The affiliated schools are indicated by printing the number of units credit after the name of the school.

In some cases full data were not received. In such cases the spaces are left blank. The information on some of the items was, in cases, more extensive than could be printed. It was necessary in many cases to slightly modify the material in order to get some uniformity. The purpose has been, however, to give essentially the information received.
